Report: Bentley's Involvement in Education

Bentley believes in supporting education in order to better prepare future engineers for their careers with access to engineering software and on-demand learning! They have just added two new additions to their academic suite of software - LEGION Modeler and Synchro. They are also partnering with high schools in order to get their software into the hands of millions of students!

LEGION Modeler and Synchro join an impressive lineup of over 50 different software available in Bentley's academic suite. The new software makes the Bentley suite unique for any schools or students interested in the built environment, AEC and infrastructure - including software used by 47 of state DOTs (MicroStation) including CalTrans, leading water and storm/sewer software for hydraulics and hydrology, gINT for geotechnical, plus ContextCapture for leading edge surveying. Now with LEGION Modeler, Synchro and Navigator for construction management. ProjectWise can also be added on special request.

East Los Angeles College just purchased Bentley's academic suite for the entirety of the Los Angeles County High School District, totaling over 1000 schools and over one million students. Bentley has issued this software subscription valued at over $100 million to LA Area high schools to help replace a graying civil engineer/surveyor population while providing tremendous opportunities for underserved youth. Not only can these students access Bentley software through their subscription, they can also access on-demand training through the STUDENTserver. This allows students to learn on their own and be even more prepared for college and their future careers!

As Bentley continues to value education, more and more students are able to get hands-on access and on-demand learning for software that will help them be ahead of their competition when they enter their careers.
